

For Immediate Release

Genuine grass-roots preservation effort

March 23, 2005 (DELAWARE RIVER VALLEY) – Save the date to save the river valley. High voltage power lines along the entire 73-mile stretch of the Upper Delaware River Valley? Subdivisions built on clear cut ridge tops? River wildlife decimated by inappropriate development and runoff?

Attend the first public meeting of the Upper Delaware Preservation Coalition (UDPC) on Sunday, April 3 at 1:00 p.m. at the Lackawaxen House in Lackawaxen, PA to learn about efforts to preserve our home. Foremost on the agenda will be a presentation facts and other issues concerning the Pegasus power transmission project.

The UDPC is a not-for-profit 501 C-3 (pending) corporation working to preserve the natural environment of the Upper Delaware River Valley. UDPC urges all citizens to act now to protect this place of sublime beauty they call home, not only for themselves but for their children. For more information, visit www.udpc.net or call 570/685-8774.